

The Exquisite Garment Models for Fall. They're All Ready.

Charming indeed, with an abundance of style with every new design thought thrown in. These garments represent the masterstroke of high-class tailoring; free from the sweat shops; made in well lighted, well ventilated establishments, by men tailors well up in the art of ideal garment making. Perfection? Yes. From the button holes to the inner linings. These are not the products of ill paid labor, but worthy Fall Suits and Jackets and Cloaks. Skirts that rank among the "best" in one of the finest tailoring shops in the country. Notably among the New Fall Creations is the Price Chap, a sturdy little suit for women, with just enough style in the make-up to fascinate the careful dresser. Then comes the Pony Jacket Suits, chic and embodying the correct principles which go to make up the perfect costume. And there is a score of other good creations ready and willing to pass the most careful inspection. Jackets in the trim Fall shapes and Coats of the long and gracefully flowing styles. Raincoats of superb styles. Skirts in the fashion formed pleating effects. And all priced—surprisingly low priced.

Our Washington Letter.

BY EARL W. MAYO.

WASHINGTON, October 25.—In the passing of Evelyn S. Hall, former chief of the files and mails division of the Postoffice Department, is contained a moral that will appeal to those citizens who look on work with coldness if not with aversion. For thirty-six years Mr. Hall worked for the government without availing himself of his sick leave or taking a vacation, even for one day. This week he succumbed to overwork. He now lies at rest in the Oak Hill Cemetery. For years friends of Mr. Hall had tried in vain to induce him to take a vacation. Heads of the Department (and they were many in the span of Mr. Hall's service) did all but order him to take a rest. To all entreaties and veiled commands he turned a deaf ear. Mr. Hall came of an office holding family. His father was employed in the Treasury Department before the Civil War. One brother, Edward, held a $2,000 position in the War Department when eighteen years old, the youngest man who ever filled the place.

Through the work of Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, and other Western Representatives, the question of greater appropriations for waterways improvement is creating much enthusiasm in the Middle West. This enthusiasm will mean much for Kentucky and Tennessee, and in fact for the entire South, for with the development of the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers the commerce of all states that lie near those streams will be given a marvelous impetus. The announcement was made in the capital this week that Kansas City business men have perfected plans for a line of packets to run between that city and St. Louis, one vessel already having been received and two others being on the way. It is believed here that the Kansas City fleet is merely the forerunner of great river squadrons that will soon ply the waters of the streams. Congressman Ransdell is pointing out that freight can be carried by water at one-sixth the cost by rail. He is urging the audience he and his colleagues are addressing, to exert their influence toward having Congress increase the present annual appropriation of less than $19,000,000 for waterway improvements to $50,000,000. There is reason to believe, according to students of affairs here, that Congress cannot long withstand a combined pressure for this great national work, if it is exerted steadily and persistently from the Middle West and South.

Secretary Taft is back at his desk, after his hurried spanking of the Cuban Republic. The stout cabinet officer had a rough trip from Havana to Newport News, and when he reached Washington he looked as though he had not escaped sea-sickness. He had intended to stop, on his way back, at the Florida keys, to inspect the work being done on the railway line from the mainland to Key West, which is being constructed by the Florida East Coast railroad company. However, the campaign at home and the fact that he is urgently needed to resume his duties, compelled Mr. Taft to postpone his visit, which had to do with the grant of permission to the Florida East Coast Line to cross some government property. It is not expected that his failure to stop will impede the work, for the Secretary recognizes the immense strategic importance of the new road. With trains in operation from the mainland to Key West, future uprisings in Cuba can be quelled without trouble, for ferry service will place Havana almost at the doors of Key West, and troops can be hurried over almost before the ink has time to dry on flowery revolutionary pronouncements. The road is built across the keys that are flung out in a long streamer from the Southern coast, and H. H. Flagler, president of the road, declares the unique line will be in operation within two years.

Another evidence of China's gradual emancipation from the chains of ancient custom and superstition that have bound her so long, is found in the fact that Sir Chentung Liang-Chong, the Chinese Minister will retain his post in spite of the fact that his mother is dead. Chinese custom dictates that the period of mourning must be three years, but an imperial decree has just been received which permits Sir Liang-Chong to curtail the term to 100 days. For that period the minister will not be seen socially or diplomatically, and his work will be carried on by subordinates. Hitherto Chinese officials to this country who suffered losses of parents while in office, were compelled to resign and return home.

Mutiny in the Navy! Mutiny, too, against the orders of the President, who is Commander-in-Chief! This is the State of affairs that is amusing all Washington. Evidence of direct disobedience of orders was found this week when the "Proceedings of the Naval Institute," a quarterly published by officers in the United States Navy, came from the Government Printing Office. Through page after page investigators went, breathlessly, and everywhere were evidences that the "Rozvelt sistem" of spelling had been systematically ignored. Orders were issued to the printing office some time ago by President Roosevelt to make certain changes in a list of 300 words. The naval men balked at the reforms and in balking defied the Commander-in-Chief. Whether the mutineers are to swing at the end of a yard-arm, be reprimanded or be treated with cool silence, is unknown. The White House is holding its peace.

Postal receipts in the United States for September, it is given out, are, in round numbers, $250,000 greater than for the same month of 1905. The receipts for last month were $6,756,347.14. New York and Chicago were the only cities that passed the million mark, the receipts of the former being $1,460,-

341.31, and of the latter $1,107,201.93. The greatest percentage of decrease was noted in San Francisco, where the receipts fell to $110,841.67 or 24.99 per cent below that of September 1905. However, Los Angeles retrieved her sister city's record, for it returned the greatest increase for the month, doing 26.08 per cent more business than during the same month in the previous year. The earthquake and the attendant stagnation of business in San Francisco, accounted for both extremes.

Pat's Conversion.

Pat was in the habit of going home drunk every night and beating his wife, Biddy—not because he disliked her, but because he thought it was the thing to do. Finally Biddy lost patience and appealed to the priest. The priest called that evening, and Pat came home drunk as usual.

"Pat," said the priest, "you're drunk, and I'm going to make you stop this right here. If you ever get drunk again I'll turn you into a rat—do you mind that? If I don't see you I'll know about it just the same, and into a rat you go. Now, you mind that."

Pat was very docile that night, but the next evening he came home even worse drunk than ever, kicked in the door, and Biddy dodged behind the table to defend herself.

"Don't be afraid, darlint," says Pat, as he steadied himself before dropping into a chair. "I'm not goin' to bate ye. I won't lay the weight of me finger on ye. I want ye to be kind to me to-night, darlint, and to remember the days when we was swatehearts and when ye loved me. Ye know his riverence said last night if I got drunk again he'd turn me into a rat. I didn't see me, but he knows I'm drunk, and this night into a rat I go. But I want ye to be kind to me, darlint, and watch me, and when ye see me gittin' little, and the hair growin' out on me, and me whiskers gittin' long, if ye ever loved me, darlint, keep your eye on the cat."

Walton Sued for Damages.

Noel Gaines, editor of the Crusader, a monthly paper issued at Frankfort, Tuesday morning entered suit against William P. Walton, editor of the Kentucky State Journal, for $25,000 libel. The suit grows out of the publication of the interview of General Percy Haly, and comments on the same by the State Journal, in which the paper charged that Gaines had forged the Haly-Lassing letter, in which the attitude of the Beckham administration was shown up in regard to the unit bill and other whisky matters.
